The ABA's White Collar Crime National Institute consistently receives high ratings not only for the exceptional quality of its publication, the panelists' presentations, and the valuable updates on new developments and strategies, but also for the rare opportunity to meet colleagues in this field, renew acquaintances, and exchange ideas. Gain valuable insight on significant legal developments in each region, skills training in trial practice, antitrust enforcement and international extradition. The institute will have significant representation from the corporate sector, the federal judiciary, as well as the leadership of the Department of Justice. Join leading prosecutors and defense attorneys, while earning ethics credit, as they discuss joint defense agreements and the limits of representing clients.
