Benesch is pleased to announce that it has been named a recipient of the American Health Law Association's (AHLA) 2026 Top Honors for the sixth consecutive year. This recognition reflects the firm's longstanding commitment to professional development, leadership and meaningful engagement within the health law community, as well as its continued support of AHLA's mission.

Top Honors recognizes firms and organizations that consistently and enthusiastically sustain their members' and employees' affiliation with AHLA. The distinction reflects an organization's sustained investment in health law education and the professional development of its team. This year, Benesch reached 41 active members, reflecting continued growth in the firm's engagement with the health law community.

"Benesch demonstrates precisely the kind of sustained institutional commitment that strengthens the health law profession," said David S. Cade, Chief Executive Officer of the American Health Law Association. "By investing in their professionals' engagement with AHLA, they advance the quality of legal counsel across the healthcare industry."

"We're honored to again be recognized with AHLA's Top Honors," said Healthcare Practice Group Chair Frank Carsonie. "Our attorneys are deeply invested in the issues shaping the healthcare industry, and AHLA provides an unparalleled forum for collaboration, knowledge-sharing and leadership."

Benesch's nationally recognized Healthcare Practice Group has decades of experience advising healthcare stakeholders across transactions, administrative and judicial advocacy and the compliance issues that shape day-to-day operations. The group has earned significant industry recognition, including national rankings by Chambers® for more than a decade and Top Tier recognition by Best Law Firms® since 2021.

The American Health Law Association (AHLA) is the nation's premier nonpartisan educational organization focused on legal issues in healthcare. Serving more than 14,000 health law professionals nationwide, AHLA advances excellence in health law practice through comprehensive educational programs, professional development opportunities and a community of attorneys, compliance professionals, healthcare executives and consultants.
