Law360 recently published an article highlighting Benesch Partner Mark Eisen and Senior Managing Associate Olivia Sullivan for their representation of Northwestern University in a biometric privacy lawsuit involving photographs taken at university events.

According to the article, Northwestern successfully secured a ruling that allowed the university to avoid, for now, certain claims brought under Illinois' Biometric Information Privacy Act (BIPA) related to event photographs. The decision reflects ongoing judicial scrutiny of how biometric privacy laws apply in the context of images captured at public or semi-public events.
