Overview

Laura is a seasoned litigation and dispute resolution attorney with extensive experience representing clients in complex commercial disputes at both the federal and state levels. She brings a strategic, results-oriented approach to every matter, drawing on years of experience advising companies in the technology, financial services, and manufacturing industries.

With a robust track record in high-stakes litigation, Laura focuses primarily on breach of contract and business tort cases, while also handling matters involving intellectual property disputes, shareholder conflicts, and product liability. Her experience managing cross-border and multi-party disputes demonstrates her ability to navigate intricate legal and commercial challenges with precision and insight.

Laura has successfully represented a range of clients—from emerging companies to global corporations—in disputes involving complex contractual relationships and distribution arrangements. Known for her strategic judgment and pragmatic problem-solving, she helps clients resolve disputes efficiently, minimize risk, and protect their business objectives. By combining deep industry knowledge with practical advocacy, Laura ensures her clients achieve favorable outcomes both inside and outside the courtroom.

In addition to her commercial practice, Laura maintains an active pro bono docket focused on international human rights matters, reflecting her ongoing commitment to access to justice and global advocacy.
